About: Work release facilities serve as a bridge between life in prison and life in the community. Incarcerated individuals who complete the work release program are more likely to be successful in maintaining employment, stable housing, and in paying legal financial obligations. Recent research conducted by the Washington State Institute for Public Policy indicates that work release programs have a positive cost/benefit impact: for every dollar spent, $3.82 is returned to the state.

King County: (Community presentation materials will be added to the respective community section approximately two weeks after each community meeting.)

North Central (Chelan, Douglas, Kittitas counties): (Community presentation materials will be added to the respective community section approximately two weeks after each community meeting.)

Pierce County: (Community presentation materials will be added to the respective community section approximately two weeks after each community meeting.)

Snohomish County: (Community presentation materials will be added to the respective community section approximately two weeks after each community meeting.)
